

Haunted Wine Tour Audition Reading: The Expert

In July of 1861 and August of 1862, the Confederate and Union armies fought in the First and Second Battles of Bull Run. Altogether, more than 22,000 men lost their lives here. They died violent and premature deaths preceded by physical anguish and emotional turmoil. Since then, Bull Run has been no stranger to psychic and supernatural phenomena. Especially at night. Lights will switch off. You can sometimes hear laughter or crying. Printers in the offices will just print random pages with random words. On more than one occasion, staff members have entered an empty room to the sight and smell of cigar smoke. There are even stories of wine glasses being left out and emptied. So, watch your drink.
